JUVENILE GRANGE ACTIVITIES

On Friday afternoon, August 9th, people going by the Grange Hall corner in Mattapoisett saw much activity of the busy members of the Mattapoisett Juvenile Grange. Various booths, flowers, vegetables and balloons lent much color to the annual Penny Fair put on by this Junior group of busy workers and supervised by the worthy Juvenile master Barry Denham. This was a most successful affair and with so many penny articles, the committee have turned in $58.95 for their general treasury.

It was very gratifying to see so many adults as well as children around the tables the different committees had prepared. The food table was presided over by Joanne Peirce and Penny Denham. Other committees were Carolyn Lewis and Susan Silva, white elephants; Allan and Milton Vaughan and Billy Harris, vegetables; David Bradley and Francis Kelley, books; Marilyn Lewis, plants and flowers; Eddie Alves, candy; John and Joseph Alves, balloons; Barry Denham, soda; Jimmy Costa and Norwood Moore, horse shoe pitching; Doris Fearing and Joann Silva, rummage.

Much credit goes to these young people who planned and carried out this Penny Fair in such efficiency.

the Juvenile Grange met with the assistant matron, Mrs. Dorothy Harris, in the dining room of the Grange Hall and worked on State and National projects.

Articles were made from plastic baskets, soap carving, pot holders for the girls 5 to 9 years old and aprons for girls 10 to 15 years old. This is part of the State project.

Work was done on the homemade "Pommawonga" game, a national project.

Other projects of interest were accomplished. Many of these articles will go to the State Grange Session in October to be judged.

PEACE CORPS

India and Pakistan have asked the Peace Corps for 88 more volunteers trained in agricultural skills, Plymouth County agent Manager, Robert B. Ewing, has announced.

Training will begin next September for 30 poultry specialists and 25 dairy husbandmen requested by India and for 22 agricultural extension workers, 6 farm mechanics and 5 vocational agriculture teachers to work in Pakistan, Mr. Ewing said.

The Peace Corps already has 160 volunteers on the job in India and 205 in Pakistan. The call for additional workers reflects the need for trained agriculture personnel to help increase food and fiber production in these and many other developing nations, Mr. Ewing pointed out.

In addition to the poultry projects, Volunteers skilled in dairy husbandry will help Indian farmers improve their methods of breeding, feeding and managing dairy stock and the processing and marketing of dairy products.

In Pakistan, Peace Corps Volunteers will work to improve methods of irrigation, machinery maintenance, marketing, plant protection and soil conservation at the village level. They will be working through experimental stations, workshops and agricultural training schools.

The agriculture and rural community action programs in Pakistan are being developed jointly by the Peace Corps, the Future Farmers of America and the New Farmers of America in cooperation with the Pakistani Department of Agriculture and the Cooperative Development Board. The overseas staffs of FFA and NFA will share with the Peace Corps the logistical and technical support required for the work of the Volunteers, Mr. Ewing was advised.

The great need for Volunteers to work in agricultural projects such as those planned for India and Pakistan was summarized recently by a young Peace Corpsman working in South Asia, who described the challenge of his assignment this way:

"People who live on a handful of rice a day, who cannot read or write and have never seen or heard of modern conveniences--how can we help them? By improving farm methods to support twice this number of people. Because it can be done, it must be done. There are endless improvements that can be made. We are struggling for perfection--they are strug-

These must not come in a high-level capacity, but must be down-to-earth, hard-working and patient. Above all, those who come must be able to love a people because they are people and to help them because they need help."

ANNUAL FAIR HELD

A Pretty Day - by Julia L. Keane

Oh! I do enjoy a pretty day
When the sky is so crystal clear,
That I can see ever so far away,
And everything seems so near.

The white clouds sail on the deep blue sky
Like the white ships sail on the sea.
The sea-gulls are wheeling way up high,
The swallows are skimming the lea.

All is crisp and bright all over the land -
The grass and the trees so green;
That I know some One, with a mighty hand
Has washed the whole world clean.

ATLAS ON GOVT IN MASS. AVAILABLE

A complete atlas of information covering every branch of government in Massachusetts has been published by the Republican State Committee to provide a long-needed handy reference for the general public and others concerned with civic affairs, William A. Lincoln, chairman of the Republican Finance Committee announced today.

The 1963 Massachusetts Yearbook and Buyers' Guide, as it is called, is divided into six sections. It presents political experts, newspaper men, industry and interested citizens with a detailed atlas of information never before available in one volume.

The new GOP Yearbook provides detailed information on every city and town in the Commonwealth, including complete election statistics, maps of Congressional and State political sub-divisions. It describes in detail how a bill becomes law, and trends in recent presidential, gubernatorial and senatorial voting. It also presents communication medias, population data and a fund of other vital information at finger-tip availability. The Yearbook and Buyers' Guide is avail-
